

bound to keip lawis and promeisses to thair subjectis, but also, that in caise thai faill thay justlie may be deposeit; for the band betwix the prince and the peopill is reciproce."

SOURCES.—Acts of the Parliament of Scotland, vols. ii. and iii.; Calendar of Scottish Papers, edited by Bain, vols. i. and ii., 1547-69; Labanof, Lettres de Marie Stuart, 1542-69; Teulet, Relations, t. ii., 1559-73 ; Knox, History, vol. ii. ; Calderwood, History; Keith, Affairs of State; Boece, The History and Chronicles of Scotland, translated by Bellenden; Memoirs of His Own Life, by Sir James "Melville (Banna-tyne Club); Diurnal of Occurrents (ibid.); Hay Fleming, Mary Queen of Scots (1897); Hume Brown, John Knox, vol. ii., and History of Scotland, vol. ii. (1902); Tytler, History of Scotland, vol. iii.; Burton, History of Scotland, vol. iv.; Froude, History of England ; Lang, History of Scotland, vol. ii. (1902); Martin Hume, Love Affairs of Mary Queen of Scots (1903); Mathieson, Politics and Religion in Scotland, 1550-1695, vol. i. (1902).